INTRODUCTORY NOTE

The cataloguing of the Osler Society presentations had as its genesis my curiosity about the nature of the talks in the earlier years of the society. Mark Silverman, President of the American Osler Society in 2000 had also conceived of a “talk about the talks” as he cleverly put it. Mark and others have kindly provided me with the programs of the earlier years and this project has moved forward with his approval and blessing. My work was jump started by the compilation of the first seventeen years by Jack D. Key and Barbara Tarpenning. As Osler has stated “the great republic of medicine knows and has known no national boundaries” and I have chosen to include the lectures from the London, Japanese and McGill Osler Societies. In addition, Oslerian Societies once existed at Saranac Lake, NY, Los Angeles, California and at the Mayo Clinic and I have included as many of those titles as I could locate. While perhaps the librarians or true historians could have done a better job of this, I chose to assemble the data myself and even do the tedious job of typing so that I might become more intimately acquainted with the material as I compiled it. Doing so has left me well prepared to analyze the titles to look for recurrent themes and unexpected currents. While Cushing and Bliss pointed out Osler’s distaste for the telephone (and no doubt he would have abhorred the beeper), I suspect Osler would have loved to communicate by email. That being the case, please email me at “clyde.partin @emoryhealthcare org” if you see any errors of fact, omission or commission. Special thanks to the librarians at Trudeau Medical Institute, Osler Library at McGill University, and at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester for their enthusiastic assistance. I also thank my wife, Kim DeGrove, who, while not entirely understanding of my fascination with all things Oslerian, has put up with my early morning and late night typing without complaint.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE CLUBS

It is not obvious which Osler Club should have the distinction as being the first. Ruth Mann and Jack Key eloquently reviewed this question in their 1978 presentation (1) to the American Osler Society. Soon after Osler’s death in 1919, Oslerian clubs were formed at McGill University and at the Mayo Clinic. However, there was in existence as early as 1916 an Osler Society at Queen’s University in Kingston, Ontario. William C. MacCarty, MD, a pathologist at the Mayo Clinic and former student of Osler’s at Johns Hopkins, helped form “The Osler Medical Historical Society,” with the first organizational meeting having been held August 28, 1920, in Rochester, Minnesota. Unfortunately, no further minutes exist until June 23, 1921, so when the lectures started is unclear. The perpetuation of “Osler’s ideals and to inspire contemporaries to study medical history” was their primary aim. They listed as their secondary purpose “to encourage physicians to interest themselves in the literary activities of their own times and of the past.” Picnics were held every twelfth of July to celebrate Osler’s birthday. Meanwhile, in Montreal, a foursome of thrifty medical students would each purchase a different work of Osler’s and then rotate them among themselves, essentially getting to read four of his works for the price of one. In the fall of 1920, standing at the corner of Prince Arthur and University Streets discussing their next purchases, they had the idea of expanding the group. The idea blossomed and an organizational meeting was convened at the home of Professor SE Whitnall, 323 Rue Peel on April 26, 1921. At the first regular meeting in October of 1921, two papers were read – Osler, His Medical Work by AK Geddes and Osler, His Literary Work by HV Ward. The meetings were eventually moved to the Ritz Carlton Hotel and then, when it finally opened with much anticipation in 1929, the Osler Library. The “Osler Society of McGill University,” remains primarily a student organization and is viable to date. Sadly, the society at the Mayo Clinic, after sixty-six gatherings, apparently disbanded after the July 3, 1925 meeting. In Saranac Lake, NY, on December 9, 1925, Dr. Lawrason Brown delivered the inaugural address of the Osler Club at Trudeau Sanitarium. An ephemeral group was founded on the West Coast, the “Osler Memorial Association of Los Angeles.” The first lecture was delivered by JT Finney in 1921, “A Personal Appreciation of Sir William Osler.” Other Osler Societies included the Osler Club of New York; Osler Reporting Society, Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal; Osler

Clinical Society at the University of Vermont; the Osler Society of Oxford; William Osler Society of Alberta; William Osler Society, Tufts College Medical School; Osler Society, University of Western Ontario; Osler Club at the University of California School of Medicine (organized by Rosencrantz in 1940). The Osler Club of London convened with six founding members in 1928, a year also notable for the death of Lady Osler. In 1896, a book and journal club of The Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland was founded at Osler's home with Osler as president. The name was changed to "The Osler Historical Club" in 1929. A nascent student group formed in one of the island medical schools (Granada?) around 2007 but I am unsure of its fate.

In the United States, Al Henderson, John McGovern and Tom Durant, at the urging of Charles Roland, began to conceive of the American Osler Society around 1967, informally meeting in Houston, Texas. The society was chartered in Texas in 1970. It was decided that William Bean would be the first president. A call was placed to his home in Iowa City, Iowa which found Dr. Bean on the tennis court. The callers demanded that he interrupt his game, which he did, to take the call. He accepted the request to become the president of the society and immediately returned to his tennis game. The first meeting was held in Denver, Colorado in 1971. As was the case in Montreal in 1921, two papers were read, one focusing on Oslerian medical matters and one focusing on literary matters. Japan, traditionally practicing medicine in a manner heavily influenced by the German tradition, began to send doctors to the United States after World War II. Of the many Japanese physicians who came under the spell of Osler's mystique while training in the states, it was Dr. Shigeaki Hinohara who organized the Japan Osler Society in 1983 with forty-three founding members.

While it is beyond the scope of this project, it is of interest to note that Osler's fingerprint was on any number of academic societies and clubs. Spawned in his wake were such institutions as the Interurban Clinical Clubs, the Laennec Society for the study of tuberculosis, and the Osler-endowed Tudor and Stuart Club. Though founded without his influence, he also left his touch on the Charaka Club.

ORGANIZATIONAL COMMENTS

The presentations are grouped by society and are in alphabetical order for some and by years for others. When there were two or more presenters, I have listed the other presenter(s). The asterisk identifies the lead author. The legend for abbreviations within the parenthesis is as follows:

JM.....John McGovern Lecture
 PA.....Presidential Address
 PO.....Published in The Persisting Osler
 POII.....Published in The Persisting Osler II
 POIII.....Published in The Persisting Osler III
 R.....Radbill Lecture.
 SS.....Special Symposium
 ST.....Student Presentation
 WB.....William B. Bean Student Research Award Lectureship

Many of the presentations are published elsewhere. The interested reader is advised to review An Annotated Checklist of Osleriana, Volumes I and II, edited by Earl Nation, Charles Roland, and John McGovern, for further information on if and where a talk has been published.
