What oil is recommended for hydrostatics?

Hydrostatic fluids contain an additive package designed for your mixer pump and motor and are an entirely different lubricant than automotive, transmission or diesel oils. The mixer hydrostatic system operates up to 6,000 psi and has different requirements. The viscosity of hydrostatic fluid is measured using ISO standards. If ambient temperatures seldom exceed 80°F an ISO 68 fluid can be used. If ambient temperatures frequently exceed 80°F ISO 100 fluids should be used. "Straight weight" oils are recommended as many multiple viscosity fluids (20w-50, etc.) may rapidly shear due to the high pressures your mixer system operates at.

What happens if your hydrostatic fluid is incorrect?
